What are animals for? To feed us? To cleanse our sins? Or can we be just “friends”?

Eating meat is generally defined as a natural tendency for humans. Meat is considered to be an indispensable factor in human life and something worth to sacrifice for our devotion to god.

But humans can also feel emotionally close to animals, they can be inclined to be friends with them. More and more people in the world reject to eat meat, mostly on an ethical basis. Maybe practices like veganism and vegetarianism have also some childhood roots, or they may even be a result of some natural tendency to be friend with animals.

Celebration, intends to build a sight to this very fundamental questions of human - animal relationship, from a child’s perspective.

Celebration has shown at more than ten countries festival by now . This year it was chosen best short movie at Coventry Film Festival, England.

The writer and director Elif Sözen won Purple Camera Solidarity Award from 17th Filmmor (the most popular women film festival in Turkey)
